ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Methods and apparatuses for dynamically loading and unloading power management code at runtime in a secure environment are described herein. In one embodiment, exemplary method includes loading authenticated/trusted power management code into a memory of a secure environment of an operating system (OS) and executing the power management code within the secure environment of the OS to handle power management tasks. Other methods and apparatuses are also described.